"Ikando was readily available to help me out with anything that I needed, whenever I needed it"

Michelle Douglas

The organisation started as a young people's human rights program to help address human rights abuses against young and marginalized people. The centre seeks to confront human rights issues that leave the voice of these communities silent; to help them reclaim their voice to be heard in the society where we live. They believe sexual rights are as fundamental as human rights.

The organisation uses the Popular Education methodology to reach out to the targeted individuals and communities. Popular Education means, education by the people, with the people, and for the people. Some of the methods used by the centre to reach targeted communities and schools are the use of peer educators, interactive theatre, role-plays, rap songs, dance, sculpture, story-telling and poetry, etc.

The centre uses bilateral HIV/AIDS projects as effective bridge to establish relationship between local NGOs, MSM community and government HIV/AIDS partners:

- they are a member of National HIV/AIDS Technical Working Group chaired by the Ghana AIDS Commission;
- the organisation participated in the development of National HIV/AIDS and Sex Work Strategy;
- the centre has established a referral system with government health facilities and in particular the Ghana Health Services.

The organisation's areas of operation include:

- Human Rights
- Gender Sensitization
- HIV/AIDS awareness
- Democracy & Good Governance

Ongoing activities include:

- Young people's human rights interactive theatre programmes.
- Sisters of the Heart programme: focussing on female rights.
- STI/HIV/AIDS drop-in centre.
- HIV/AIDS Intervention project
- Peer Education projects
- Library Services
- Film Festivals
